Letters To The Editor

News Media Blamed

Sir:

I found the April edition of The Ohio Alumnus delightfully informative. The variety and nature of the articles gave an interestingly comprehensive account of Ohio University's endeavors to promote more professionalism within specific fields of study which consequently improves the motivational atmosphere for young aspirants who can note the accomplishments of their educators.

One is constantly aware of the outstanding athletic program Ohio University apparently has by publicity of its winning ways. However, only recently have I heard much about the University's pride in its scholastic contributions to its students, community and country.

In my senior year, 1961-62, I wrote a letter to the editor of The Post requesting information regarding the scholastic status or quality of my alma mater. A smattering of replies evaded the direct question by philosophically explaining that an educational institution can not be fully evaluated by statistics. This may be true, but nothing can ever be achieved only by dreaming. In evaluating an institution's quality one must also consider the end product which perhaps should reflect the adequacy of its training or development.

An alumnus with pride in his alma mater usually wants to influence others to either enroll or at least respect the institution. Not just an obviously bias appraisal but facts are what other people want. Is a university for turning out only athletic leaders, Saint Patrick's Day socialites, Mock Convention exhibitionists, or final exam traveling agents? If it is, Ohio University certainly has a strong reputation. This the press has grabbed up—for instance, Time magazine's May 15 edition practically refers to Ohio University's Mock Convention as a big joke in contrast to seven other collegiate conventions.

Now that The Ohio Alumnus has begun informing the public the other news media could also help, like the promotion film about Ohio University shown over television May 10 in the Columbus area.

Once again thank you for the last several inspiring Ohio Alumnus editions, and continue seeking more ways of providing the quality education "The Little Harvard on the Hocking" has to offer.

Letter From Alaska

Sir:

I have certainly appreciated the university's action in making The Alumnus available to all graduates. We visited the campus last summer after a five years' absence and were amazed at the changes!

I thought you might be interested in what happened to us on that eventful March 27 and the week following the earthquake. Our home is located ten miles from the heart of downtown Anchorage off the Seward Highway. Although Anchorage has suffered greatly, we should also like to emphasize that much remains of our city as we did not have the fires and flooding that hit Kodiak, Seward, Valdez, Whittier, and Portage.

Mr. Hobson is service manager for Sunset Motors in Anchorage, and until January I was a probation officer for the state, being the acting chief probation officer for Anchorage for one year of the five years I spent with the Youth and Adult Authority.

Many Changes Noted

Sir:

Thank you so much for the two editions of The Ohio Alumnus (Dec. 1963 and Jan. 1964).

It is obvious there have been considerable changes amongst the faculty — we now have a new president in Dr. Alden — and also the campus itself. I'll bet if I were to do a 'Homecoming' now, and I'd like to think I'll be able to do so some day soon, I'd hardly recognize either the place or the people. Nevertheless, I'd like you to know that of the eight years spent in the United States, three of them at Ohio University were among the happiest.

From time to time, we play hosts to visiting Americans showing them the sights, etc. May I thru the medium of your publication extend to any of the alumni, especially those whom I knew during my college days, a standing invitation to Singapore. It would give me an opportunity not only to reciprocate the very warm and kind hospitality I received in Athens but also a chance to catch up with the latest on Ohio University.

It's Just Great!

Sir:

I do not know when the Alumni Association decided to send the magazine free to all alumni for life. But I have been reading this news in the "Letters to the Editor" and this sure makes me believe that it is true.

It's just great. It gives me a kick when I show the magazine to my wife and friends — trying to explain "who is who and what is what" and my good old days at Ohio University.

Thank you for the Alumnus and I shall look forward to receiving it for the rest of my life.

Olympic Year In Tokyo

Sir:

May I thank you for the pleasure of being regularly informed of our alma mater through the magazine.

Together with the accompanied notice of my change of address, I am happy to inform you of the birth of our son Keimei on June 14, 1964, in Fukuoka City, Japan.

I have been teaching English to undergraduates at Kyushu University for the past 16 years, and have come to realize that teaching a language is teaching a country. This realization makes me feel both proud and humble.

This is the year of the Olympics in Tokyo. A word from any visitor from Ohio University is most welcome.

June Magazine Applauded

Sir:

My hearty congratulations to the Alumnus staff for doing such a magnificent job. Your June edition was especially outstanding. The photography, layout, and articles were all excellent. The spread on President Johnson was especially well done.

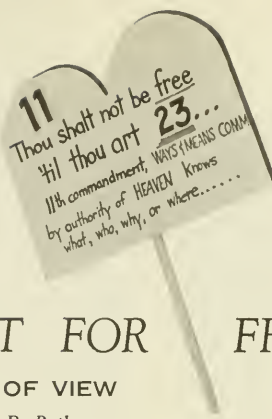

It can easily be seen that each issue of the Alumnus is preceded by lots of hard work, time, and devotion. I'm sure I speak for many fellow alumni in saying we appreciate your fine efforts.

ANY ALUMNUS or parent who takes the opportunity to examine college campuses in 1964 would conclude with concern that student problems are significantly different from those which presented themselves just four or five years ago. What are some of society's concerns about student problems of today? What are the trends for the future? Students, their problems and their quest of freedoms are the issues discussed in this article.

During the course of this past year, I have served as a consultant on several University campuses—The University of Indiana, The University of Kansas, The State University of New York at Albany and Marshall University in Huntington, West Virginia. Also, I visited several other college campuses in the State of Ohio, in addition to the University of California at Berkeley. Wherever I went, conversation plunged quickly into the issues of student freedoms, student rights, student morals, student use and misuse of alcoholic beverages, sex—and campus suicides. As I visited with other student personnel deans and talked with parents and students this past year, I became increasingly troubled about the nature of our student problems and the concerns which all of us must face during the remainder of the 1960's.

ONE DEAN'S POINT OF VIEW

by Dr. William R. Butler

Enrollment on the main Athens campus of Ohio University now totals 12,000 students, made up of many subgroups from over the State of Ohio, all states of the Union and 35 different countries of the world. It is evident that the students of Ohio University come from many walks of life. Approximately 70 per cent of our student body comes from the large metropolitan areas of Ohio. We have, indeed, a heterogenous campus culture. In recent years we have witnessed many changes in our student character and values.

It is common knowledge today that the four million students who are enrolled in over 2,000 colleges and universities throughout the U.S.A. are involved in pre-marital sex relationships in greater numbers and with greater frequency today than was true a decade ago. In recent articles in Newsweek, Time, The Ladies Home Journal, The Atlantic Monthly, and Reader's Digest, to list only a few, the reader is led to the conclusion that our campuses today are "hotbeds of sexual immorality". Among other things, these articles report that more than 50 per cent of all college women today have pre-marital sex relations and some authorities, as reported in the January, 1963, issue of the Journal of

The National Association of Women Deans and Counselors, estimate that approximately 90 per cent of all male college students on the large university campus experience pre-marital sex relations. It seems apparent that one new freedom being sought by today's student is the freedom for more sexual self-direction which would mean more privacy with members of the opposite sex and more opportunity to determine for one's self the limits of his or her own sexual behavior. As one parent recently said to me, "Today's youth want to plunge into the stream of life's problems of sex and alcohol. There is no gradualism. I'm afraid that for most it will be a sink or swim proposition as our college campuses swell during the 60's."

The morals issue on today's campus cannot be overlooked. A recent article by Fred M. Hechinger in The New York Times entitled, "Couch on Campus", quoted a Harvard psychiatrist as saying that the traditional gap between intellectual maturity and emotional maturity is getting wider. The psychiatrist observes that "many of the most exceptional students are among the most immature."

Yet, among the freedoms being sought today is the right to do what one wishes at the age of 21. When we reach 21, goes the cry, we should be "treated like adults." After all, say the students, "when you're old enough to vote and old enough to die for your country, you are old enough to decide for yourself the issues of alcohol and sex." The students feel that today's adult generation does not trust today's youth. One senior woman who graduated last June told me that we were not preparing our students for the world outside our "ivy covered walls." "After all," she stated, "when you graduate you will be on your own — no housemothers, no dormitory counselors, no deans to tell you when to come in, who cannot visit you in your apartment and the like." She went on, "I would like to have had the experience of throwing a guy out of my apartment at 4:00 a.m. if he tried to go too far with me. This is the way it will be on the 'outside.' Why won't you let us get some experiences like this on the Ohio campus?"

Another freshly tanned, blue-eyed blond girl who had just returned from Ft. Lauderdale after our spring recess, stopped me in Baker Center one day. She pleaded that "it isn't right" for the University to tell her she can't have an apartment and invite her boyfriend in on a Sunday afternoon. She went on to explain,

"At my age a motherly instinct just comes out. Furthermore," she said, "I might like to whip up a batch of mashed potatoes some evening for Johnnie."

When I visited a neighboring college campus recently, one of the professors related a story about the boldness of two college coeds. As he walked past the student union building one Friday afternoon, he viewed two girls who were wearing shorts. On the back of one was pinned a cardboard placard boldly lettered, "STAMP OUT VIRGINITY." The other girl had a similar sign lettered, "I LOVE SEX." The professor attributed this stunt to a sorority prank and he noted, "They were surely getting a lot of attention from passersby." He stated, "At the risk of being branded a square, I reported the incident to the administrators of the college."

In a recent professional meeting dealing with problems of student health, it was reported that on some campuses birth control pills are being dispensed by doctors in the student health services as well as by private practitioners in the community. It was reported that on certain campuses there is a growing student pressure to allow student health services to dispense oral contraceptives since, it is argued, this procedure is one way for college administrators to cope with the problem of pre-marital sex relations.

Until the late 1940's when G.I. Joe marched across the campus, students were able to accept, without great challenge, the fact that the university was a parent substitute for placing controls and restrictions on them. When the veteran questioned seriously the "right" of the university to place, what seemed to him, unnecessary restrictions on alcohol and sex, the younger students, who had not been to war, listened attentively. Soon the "campus lid" was off and today the university is being challenged about its "right" to require students to live in dormitories, to maintain closing hours, to place restrictions on those students 21 years and older, and to demand that students observe a moral tone and a social pattern in keeping with the high expectations of most parents, the faculty and the administration.

"What right has the university to tell me what to do since I'm 21," an angry senior male student demanded of me. "I can vote! I can die for my country! I can pay income taxes. In short," he said, "I am a citizen with full rights and privileges according to the constitution of the United States!"

In the November 24, 1956 issue of the Saturday Review former Dean Virginia Gildersleeve of Barnard College wrote a most thought provoking article. Dean Gildersleeve discusses the confusion which surrounds the word "democracy". "Democracy," she stated, "means so many things to so many people." But the Dean goes on to say that democracy is a political term which should be applied only to political units. "When we begin to apply democracy in the fields of education or scholarship, grave perils descend upon us." The Dean stresses that campus issues should not be decided by majority vote or popular opinion of the students. Dean Gildersleeve further states that, "often, students fired by enthusiasm for democracy . . . think of themselves as citizens, entitled, according to the democratic process, to determine the conduct of affairs of the institution by majority vote of the student body." Dean Gildersleeve concludes, "The only right a student has as a student is the right to receive the best possible education that the college can give." Of course, she points out that the student retains his political rights as a citizen of the state of which he is a resident.

Many other forms of "freedom revolts" are emerging on once quiet campuses. Revolts for human rights, Negro rights and even white rights are commonplace. "Ban the Bomb" marches occur and will probably continue to occur as long as there is the threat of extinguishing the human race with nuclear warfare. Student "sit-down" and "sit-in" demonstrations are regular occurrences throughout the North as well as the South.

Another facet of the changing campus relates to the aggressiveness and boldness of our students who no longer feel restricted in "testing the limits" of their college environment. I am sure that several years ago when a university dean found it necessary to say "go home" because of misconduct, the student would go without hesitation or question. Today this is not necessarily so. Usually the first question which is asked is, "Now, to whom do I appeal this decision?"

Our student governments are imitating actively many of our political and legislative bodies—both nationally and locally. Campus leaders are not content to be quiet on issues they view as vital to the student body. Student government officers and editors of campus newspapers have been more openly aggressive in expressing their opinions. Many student leaders feel, "The wheel that squeaks the loudest gets the grease." Too, they often see this same philosophy at work in state and national political groups and they are beginning to apply this same philosophy to the college campuses.

It is interesting to observe how "times" have changed at Ohio University over the past 160 years. For example, in the Trustee By-Laws and Regulations of 1825, it is stated that every student shall remain in his room during study hours and shall be in his room every night at 9:00 o'clock. In addition, the 1825 student was not permitted to board at a tavern without the special permission of the President of the University. No student was permitted to visit a tavern or any other place of public entertainment, to eat or to drink therein, without the special permission of the President or of one of the Professors. In addition, all students were required to attend public worship every Sabbath day.

And, in the area of university tuition and fees, each student was required to deposit with the President at the beginning of each semester, one dollar to help defray the cost of the student's education. Parenthetically, it should be pointed out also that any unused portion of the one dollar tuition was restored to each student at the close of the academic term.

The 1964 student, by contrast, pays a tuition fee of $225 if he is a resident of Ohio and a $425 fee if he is a non-resident. Women students have graduated closing hours during the week days—10:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m.—and on Fridays and Saturdays closing hours are 12:30 a.m. There are no closing hours for men.

Why are students revolting?

The "Student Freedoms Revolt" is indicative of the many changes which are occurring, not only on the college campuses, but in many segments of our society. We hear continually of labor revolts, teacher revolts and more recently, vicious attacks made by teenagers on the public streets of cities. Internationally, we read of Latin American revolts and Japanese student riots. We watch with fear and real concern the revolts which are occurring throughout Africa, Asia, the Far East, the Middle East and Cuba. Who knows where a revolt will occur tomorrow!

After "Blood, sweat and tears" were expended during World War II, we hoped that the war's end would return our country and the world to normalcy. In 1945, we witnessed the so called period of post-war return to normalcy on the campus. But, the normalcy of the pre-war days did not return. Instead, armed conflict between nations was replaced by international chaos which affected greatly the college campus as well as our entire society. Moreover, the revolt of the Communists throughout the world has shaken the complacency of Western man and his ideology. All the while, the gap between our technological and scientific advances and our ability to resolve world problems in a peaceful manner grows wider by the minute.

Thus, our rapidly changing, energetic, dynamic, challenging, sometimes threatening and very uncertain world creates a new climate for our students, and the stage has been set for student rights and freedoms to be accentuated in the academic community. Moreover, if one examines any rapidly growing campus in our country, he would conclude that there has been a gradual loss of personal contact and relationship between faculty members and students outside the classroom. With the gradual withdrawal of faculty from such contacts, student relationships with faculty and staff outside the classroom are often official ones, and are characterized as being a part of "the administrative process." Such a withdrawal of student-faculty contacts has brought about a need for an increase in the number of deans and directors in charge of student services in order to help the many "anomic" individuals or lost souls who walk across our campuses.

Another point to keep in mind is the heritage of the American people. The early colonial settlers were revolting from the hardships of their lives and from religious oppressions in England and Europe. They revolted for new freedoms abroad. The American Revolution was our pronouncement to the world that we wished to become a self-directing nation. When life in the New England colonies became too settled and too tame for the adventurer, the West with its excitement and new freedoms was sought. Actually, many educators feel that the pattern of campus life which we find today is related directly to the ideals of our heritage which took root during the early colonial period. Americans still place a high premium and value upon the concept of "individual freedom" and the "right" to seek new freedoms. Even though our lives become more industrialized, more specialized, more routinized, we still revere our independence and right to seek new freedoms. One psychologist has expressed to me that the present student revolt for a new freedom is an expression of youth's aggression toward the only remaining form of college authority and control. He points out that there is little left about which today's youth can be aggressive—except the control which college officials still try to maintain over sex and alcohol. It is true that today's youth has most of the comforts he desires—a car, money, clothes, food, an education if he wants it, a job at graduation with fringe benefits promised and a handsome retirement to which he may look forward. Recently, a college freshman expressed his ambition to this psychologist succinctly when he said, "My ambition is to become a retired business executive." This generation knows not what it means to go hungry or to wonder if a college education can be a reality. The psychologist concluded his remarks by saying, "What new frontiers are left in our present society for today's youth? Sex and alcohol represent to the students the only frontiers which have not yet been conquered."

What are the Directions For Our Colleges and Universities?

A university administration and faculty need to examine critically its philosophy and understanding of the concept, "in loco parentis." It can be assumed that each of the 2,000 colleges and universities in the United States will define in its own way its responsibilities as a parent substitute. As a residential campus, Ohio University has traditionally maintained that it must place certain minimum standards of conduct before its student body, and it has held firmly to these standards over the many years. The students are advised that there are certain rules of conduct which must be observed. University regulations treat severely the book thief; the student who possesses or consumes alcohol on university property or in or on the premises of living units, dormitories, fraternities, sororities, or approved private homes; the boy and girl who spend the night together in an apartment or fail to return to their residence and, instead, take an "overnight" without proper approval.

In one university discipline hearing this past year, a student demanded that the committee show him where it was stated in writing that the stealing of merchandise from a local merchant by a student would result in the student's suspension from the university. A student representative on the committee replied, "Even if it isn't in a university publication, I know of a book that was written some 2,000 years ago which states, "Thou shalt not steal." The accused student's eyes fell immediately to the floor and no further comment was made.

One of the most refreshing articles written recently which dealt with moral standards was published in the January, 1964 issue of Ladies Home Journal. The author, Jennie Loitman Barron is a judge on the Superior Court of Massachusetts. The article entitled, "Too Much Sex on Campus," was later published in the May, 1964 issue of Reader's Digest. Judge Barron surveys the recent problems of sexual promiscuity among college students and offers several directions for college officials. First she states that the problem must be treated frankly and without fear of stirring up a scandal. She tells us that college officials are "duty-bound to protect the emotionally immature girl;" that the college "must assume the task of maintaining the standards of proper moral behavior demanded by parents and society." To give a young college woman "unrestricted opportunities, to give her freedom to study in a boy's room, to set curfew as late as 3:00 or 4:00 a.m., and then expect her to avoid emotional and biological perils, is absurd."

In his April 26, 1964 sermon at the First Presbyterian Church in Athens, Ohio Campus Pastor, Rev. Thomas Niccolls, outlined the many problems of today's sexual promiscuity on the campus and in our society. Five years ago such a sermon would have been a sure way to end one's ministry in the Athens Church or, for that matter, in most of the other Presbyterian Churches in the country. But Rev. Niccolls boldly stated: "Unfortunately, the Church and Christian parents are rarely realistic about equipping their offspring to battle these (sex) pressures. We have hoped that we could simply arm sons and daughters with the slingshot ideal of chastity and fidelity and send them out to meet the giants."

One matter which college officials must study immediately is the broad question of the relationship between student rights and student responsibilities. The significance of this relationship in fulfilling the educational objectives of the university is important. More specifically, how much freedom is necessary in order for us to create and maintain a desirable learning environment? To what degree should students be held responsible for the exercise of their freedoms if they are to become effective members of the academic community? To what extent should students over and under the age of 21 be given the responsibility for their own behavior without supervision? How much university control of student conduct is desirable? As a residential campus and a State institution, what responsibility does the university have for student behavior?

One Dean's View:

There are undoubtedly as many views of how a university should establish student standards and limits as there are deans employed in the 2,000 colleges and universities in our country. I personally would plead for more of our faculty and administrators, as well as parents, to share more frequently with students their own standards, values, and the ways they feel personally about different social, cultural and personal issues. In far too many instances our young men and women are establishing inter-personal relationships of "immaturity" with their peers rather than identifying with mature and experienced adults. David L. McKenna, President of Spring Arbor College in Michigan, observes that there is still time for colleges to take a distinctive stand and "strike at the very points where the Morals Revolution is taking hold on the college campus." In his article, "The Morals Revolution and the Christian College" which appeared in the June 19, 1964 issue of Christianity Today,

President McKenna observes: "While the Morals Revolution may be described in the press, it is being acted out on the college campus. Although actions of many students have not yet caught up with the new morality, the minority is increasing in size and is setting the pace for others."

In addition, I feel that colleges and universities need to articulate better the "ground rules," the "limits" and the "rules of the game" for their students. We need to clarify our standards, our limits and our expectations and to set forth what is important and what is unacceptable in our university communities. There is no doubt that holding to standards which may at times be unacceptable to student opinion is difficult as well as unpopular.

At Ohio University we do not adhere to the totally authoritarian decision-making process. Nor on the other hand do we believe in an indifferent administrative attitude. We attempt to involve our students in the every day discussions of the University whenever this procedure seems to be advisable or feasible. This past year over 50 of our student leaders were appointed along with members of the faculty and administration to standing policy-making committees of the University. As far as our campus discipline and standards are concerned, we have attempted to be forthright, to make clear our standards, to be consistent in our decisions, to be fair and yet firm when necessary.

A university must examine continually its beliefs, its rules and regulations and, perhaps, must modify its position on certain issues when day to day experiences demonstrate that an existing position is unwise. By re-examination of standards and limits, the members of the academic community can better understand the position of the university and behavioral expectations become more clear to students and to faculty. It seems that such a position is far better than an indifferent "hands off" policy when dealing with difficult matters. Through an indifferent attitude a university is actually making decisions by default. Student values and characters are being formed and influenced whether we attempt to set forth a social philosophy or not. Thus, each university must decide for itself to what extent and how it shall attempt to influence the character and value systems of its students.

In summary, it is my belief that the many problems involved in today's student revolt for freedoms are merely expressions of behavior which one sees as our youth search and grope for self-direction. The problems of sex, alcohol, aggression, testing the limits, and the like, are symptoms of the real concerns involved in youths' search for self-identification. Today's youth is attempting to throw off conventional standards which have seldom permitted open and frank discussions, let alone rebellion. Our society has not permitted college students to express themselves openly on many issues. On the other hand, our society has, in the past, defined a moderate road for a youth to follow in his search for self-realization.

And so, the issues of student freedoms, rights, responsibilities and moral standards continue to be discussed—in the classrooms, in the living units, in the churches, and in the parked cars late at night. What posture should Ohio University assume in the months and years ahead? It is recognized that colleges and universities cannot do everything. Nor have some fathers and mothers necessarily done a very good job at home before the "Suzies" and "Johnnies" come to our campus. On the other hand, what are the expectations of alumni and parents about the role of a modern university in today's most complex and rapidly changing society?

ONE PARENT'S POINT OF VIEW

by Mrs. Howard C. Schmidt

ONE OF THE MOST worthwhile but challenging accomplishments in life is the wise rearing of children. As parents, we have assumed a great obligation. We are wholly responsible—spiritually, morally and financially—for the growth and development of our children to help them to mature and to be able to function adequately on their own.

This sometimes rapid process of growth entails making decisions, decisions and more decisions. Some problems have immediate "yes" or "no" answers, but others require much weighing and sifting, which often gives parents a feeling of riding a see-saw.

Parents are not infallible. We rely heavily upon the school system, our churches, youth and scout organizations to help develop healthy bodies and sound minds in our children. We desire our children to become involved in numerous outside activities and to acquire personal contact with other educated adults who help them develop well-balanced personalities, and also, become familiar with outsiders methods of discipline and points of view.

As parents, we guide, discipline, and restrain. And yet, we try not to be overly protective by exposing our children to the dangers of the hard realities of life. We try to make convenient opportunities for our children to exercise their latent potentials.

The first years of a child's life are closely entwined with his parents holding the reins of restraint first very tightly, then gradually letting loose inch by inch. We watch a young mind develop and make decisions—sometimes with pangs of regret, more often making obstacles their stepping stones.

Ultimately, the day comes when we realize we are now communicating with another adult—younger, yes, a gap of a whole generation—but nevertheless, another adult. Then it's off to college.

Now how do we live harmoniously with our new friend, who is living away from home nine months of the year, pursuing a higher education, a whole new world of thought, persons and places? This too often is a world that is foreign to many parents who have not had the opportunity to experience it. How thoughts and doubts assail us!

Therefore, in our so-called modern world of the 60's, we expect the administration of Ohio University to make their rules and regulations the same as we have made ours for the first 17 or 18 years. We hope that we have sent out our sons and daughters disciplined and conditioned to life to the best of our ability. And we would hope that Ohio University will help them to continue to develop and become useful human beings.

Foremost in our thoughts, we hope that our children will become worthwhile, useful citizens and assets to our torn world. We fervently pray that our children will help preserve our belief in God.

When our sons and daughters leave home and we can no longer see from day to day their ups and downs, their happiness and heartaches, their triumphs and disappointments, we would hope that someone at Ohio University would be interested and concerned if a problem occurred that could be solved only with adult advice and understanding. Everyone-Everywhere needs someone to talk with, and often a student's dearest friend is not the one.

We expect Ohio University to offer the highest quality of education, and to provide professional educational counseling and the most outstanding faculty that can be enticed to campus. Acknowledging that Ohio University is a state-supported institution, we must assume our portion of responsibility as taxpayers.

Regardless of how much effort we have expanded on early training or how perfect we consider our sons or daughters, we are not so naive to believe there is not the first time for everything.

There are numerous reasons why a student cannot adjust to college life—not all of them derogatory to either the student, administration or parents. If our children do not qualify to meet the requirements of the University we expect to assume further responsibility until they are ready.

Young adults obtaining higher education away from their home town must realize that they are also engaged in a perpetual process of maturing and accepting their new world about them. They are still living under the rules and regulations of God, government, University and society. There is no getting away from rules and restraint on freedom—they are antiquities. Student government has a voice in setting up some of these rules and regulations. However, the entire Student Government system should be reviewed and methods revised to make it function more effectively to serve as an asset to the university.

Young adults, if they do not marry, are confronted with conflicting impulses, emotions and desires. I would question whether rules or regulations could have any real impact on restraining sexual promiscuity as this is a very personal involvement—but one that can alter all of one's hopes and dreams of the future. The consequences are many and all very severe.

Let us consider the personal tragedies—an illegitimate child, venereal disease, one's conscience, abortions, a forced marriage and often one of the most reproachable messes in which one could ever become involved.

The University should show films on the incredible destruction that venereal disease can do to a mind and body. The administration must continue to adhere to strict rules and regulations imposed on unapproved housing until a complete study can be made to find a way to alleviate living accommodations for those who are worthy of being more independent. Until such time, restrictions are necessary for the sake of the reputation of the university students, parents and society.

Harry E. Fosdick, D. D., in "On Being a Real Person," says, "The personal counselor constantly runs upon self-focused lives, miserably striving to find happiness through 'self-expression'. Popularly, self-expression has meant; Let yourself go: knock the bungs from your emotional barrels and let them gurg! As a protest against petty moralisms, this is easily explicable, and as a means of release to some individuals, tied hand and foot by senseless scrupulosities, it has had its value. The wise counselor wants self-expression too; but he wants it to be practiced in accord with the realistic psychological facts. Merely exploding emotions for the sake of the momentary self-centered thrill gets one nowhere and in the end the constant repetition of such emotional self-relief disperses life and leaves it more aimless than it was before."

By the time a student arrives at the University has he not received enough lecturing, preaching, teaching and threats to guide him along the right path? If not, is it now too late to begin?

My same thoughts apply to the excessive or abusive use of alcohol. If early training and exposure to the pitfalls of over-indulgence has not made an impressive impact on a person's mind at the young adult age level what more can be said or done? True, being a normal human being, one must experiment. It is one thing to go to the Club 33 or the Inferno, but it is another side of the coin to waste one's time, efforts and parent's money to drink. Here again, Ohio University can only impose its rules, regulations and subsequent penalties since the final decision rests with the student.

Rules and regulations are placed upon all of us throughout life. We must obey them or suffer the consequences. Age is not a deciding factor in determining what we should or should not do. It would do us all well to remember that our first and most important rules were placed upon us by God and as He owns all and rules all, He is the One we must eventually answer to.

Four years of one's life is not too long a period of time to practice self-discipline and some conformity. The rewards are many.

As I have often written to my son: Wine, women and song—handle the first two with caution and care but—son, you can sing as loud and as long as your heart desires for the next four years.

COMMENTS on both Dr. Butler's and Mrs. Schmidt's articles will be appreciated. Address all letters to Editor, The Ohio Alumnus, Box 722, Athens, Ohio. Letters received will be printed in future issues of The Alumnus.

Dr. Hiram Roy Wilson Dies

DR. HIRAM ROY WILSON, former national president of the Ohio Alumni Association and professor emeritus of English, died August 4 in Sheltering Arms Hospital, Athens, O. He was 89 years old.

Dr. Wilson, a native of Hamden, O., received his bachelor of arts degree from Ohio in 1896 and his master's degree the following year. He received the doctor of letters degree in 1911 from Franklin College, Ind.

Dr. Wilson joined the faculty in 1897 and was made head of the English department in 1906, retaining that post for 30 years. The title "professor emeritus" was bestowed at the time of his retirement in 1945, as the oldest member of the faculty in point of service. In 1954 he was named honorary chairman of the Alumni Sesquicentennial Scholarship Committee.

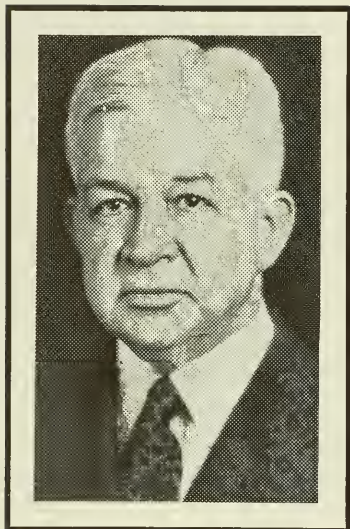

Listed in "Who's Who," Dr. Wilson was the author of literary works and textbooks and was founder of the Book Lovers Club at the university. He was national president of the alumni association for two years, 1927-29, and addressed scores of alumni groups. He also served as secretary of the faculty from 1918 to 1936.

An accomplished musician, the beloved professor emeritus played the violin, cello and piano and was at one time a member of the university's string quartet.

Dr. Wilson found retirement an extremely busy job. Among his favorite daily functions were his piano practices, the reading and studying of Dante in the original Italian, and the examination of his favorite magazines.

He was a member of numerous organizations, including Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honor society, Delta Tau Delta social fraternity, Phi Mu Alpha music honorary, National Council of Teachers of English, Modern Language Association, and the English Club. He also helped form the present faculty club.

Dr. Wilson was preceded in death by his wife, Mrs. Florence Craig Wilson. Services and burial were conducted in Athens.

New Dimensions Through Accomplishment

JOHN F. WAGNER is a wholesale hardware salesman from Ridgely, W. Va. In his free time, he soars over the West Virginia and Maryland mountains in a sailplane, matching his skill against the tricky highs and lows of air currents.

Fred D. Leach is director of the School of Painting at Ohio University. For him, free time is an outlet to the artist's sensitivity as he creates his own canvasses, matching skill against mood and imagination.

Today, through the discipline of Ohio University's Second Alumni College, John Wagner has discovered a touch of the artist he did not know was within him, and Fred Leach is committed to the fulfillment of a long-standing desire to fly gliders. (Dr. Leach visited Wagner in August to receive instruction.)

The exhilaration that comes with accomplishment was shared by Alumnus Wagner with thirty other graduates who returned to the Athens campus for the Alumni College. But—all agreed—it was the former Cleveland resident who responded in Dr. Leach's figure drawing class with a touch akin to genuine talent.

John's wife, Elizabeth, '43 a one-time advertising agency production manager who is now a full-time housewife with a young family, was equally proud.

"After more than fifteen years of marriage, I thought I knew everything about my husband," she said. "Then comes this new dimension. We've both enjoyed the entire week immensely, but John's experience alone has made it more than worthwhile."

The Wagner's enthusiasm was infectious. Anne Smith, a 1948 graduate from Warren, Pa., plans to return next summer with her husband John if relatives will again look after their six children. But, she cautioned, "Please don't offer a choice in the courses! If John could have taken anything else, he would never have agreed to attend the art class. After the first day, he had a ball."

John Smith, '46 a business major at Ohio, was equally pleased with his participation in Dr. Fred Picard's Contemporary Economics Class and Dr. John Cady's Southeast Asia lectures.

"Every class was interesting and informative," he said. "The Alumni College faculty was first rate."

In addition to Leach, Picard and Cady, three other faculty men helped to make the continuing education program a smashing success. Informal, evening lectures were presented by Mr. Cecil Hemley, University Press editor, on modern books and authors; Dr. Ray Gusteson on the 1964 political campaigns, and Dr. John Walker on the modern theater.

Faculty members and their wives, captured by the spirit of the Alumni College "students," went beyond the classroom to join participants in cook-outs, social hours and a theater party.

Mrs. Vernon R. Alden, wife of the university president, and Mrs. Thomas Smith, the vice president's wife, joined alumni in classes. Mrs. Alden spent two of the five days in painting, economics and Asia lectures, and Mrs. Smith, who plans to enroll full-time next summer, joined an art theory discussion group.

At the final day's graduation luncheon, Dr. Cady—appointed spokesman for the faculty, observed "that not since the veterans were in my classes have I found a group so challenging to a professor, so intent to learn and gather information. It was truly a delight."

Not all the fun was in the classroom. Each afternoon, Coaches Kermit Blosser and Carroll Widdoes taught golf and bowling, and arranged Alumni College tournaments, and there were afternoon splash parties at the Natatorium.

Recreation programs paid dividends for some. Kathleen Johnson, '61, of Dayton, was given expert golf lessons by Blosser, and now feels that she can share this sport with her husband who is an avid golfer.

For Inez Stewart, '29 and Helen Johnston, 36, Carroll Widdoes opened new recreational avenues through bowling instruction, and both women are now looking forward to joining women's bowling leagues in their respective communities.

The Alumni College was, ultimately, many things to alumni. Raymond E. Young, 37, an engineer from Chicago, saw it as an opportunity to revitalize his thinking to better "compete with younger, eager minds fresh from the academic institutions."

Young not only took comprehensive notes at every lecture, but he tape recorded every spoken word at the Alumni College and he intends to review these sessions for months to come.

A woman attorney, Mrs. Olive Holmes, 38, of Cincinnati, who is chief referee for the Hamilton County Juvenile Court, now feels "stimulated to explore new fields."

Speaking of her daughter, she added: "Stephanie will be mighty surprised to discover how updated her parents' information has become. She may be the one reaching again."

Not only did Barbara Smith, of Cambridge, arrange a personal reading program with the assistance of Mr. Hemley, but she also germanated the idea which will result in the compilation of a general reading program to be made available to all alumni.

A reading list of the best in current books will be composed by faculty members and published in a near-future issue of the magazine.

CAPTURING the spirit of the Alumni College, faculty members and their wives joined participants for an evening cookout behind Voigt Hall. Recreation, under the expert guidance of Coaches Blosser and Widdoes, and a theater party also highlighted the week-long affair sponsored by the Alumni Association.

Capt. James S. Waggener, '57, hopes to integrate ideas from the Alumni College in educational programs he directs at Laughlin Air Force Base in Texas.

Five of this year's participants were sophomores. They are Mrs. Mildred Blosser, '25 of Athens; Arthur Char-koff, '51 of Cleveland; Mrs. Christina Damron, '58 of New Middletown; Mrs. Helen Johnston, '36, of Cleveland Heights, and Mrs. Julia Ann Wyman, '39 of Chillicothe.

Final speaker at the Alumni College was President Alden. In praising the thirty-one alumni who responded to the program, he predicted that the workshop would grow to become a substantial part of the summer program.

Next summer's Alumni College has been tentatively scheduled for July 11-17, 1965. Applications are being received at the Alumni Office. Registration fee is thirty dollars. The names of early enrollees will be printed in this magazine during the publication year.

MR. AND MRS. Merrill Holmes of Cincinnati chat with Dr. Raymond Gusteson, center, professor of government, during a break in the cookout festivities. Mrs. Holmes, an attorney and chief referee for the Hamilton County Juvenile Court, acted as spokesman for the group at Saturday's Commencement luncheon in Boker Center.

Ohio University in the News

A capsule account of University activity as reported by the American Press

THE SO - CALLED "Summer Slump" kept Ohio University busy as usual. An enrollment of 2860 was reported for the first of two five-week summer sessions, with more than 2500 counted for the second session. The summer session enrollment represents only a partial picture of the summer campus activities, as evidenced by the 9300 others who took part in 36 workshops and conferences during the "vacation" months.

The 19th annual Publications Workshop, largest of its kind in the nation, was limited this year to 2000 high school newspaper and yearbook editors and advisors. Dr. L. J. Hortin, director of the School of Journalism, directed the program. Highlights of the program were visits to the campus by Roscoe Drummond, nationally syndicated Washington columnist, John Mack Carter, editor of McCall's magazine, and Vernon Greene, King Features cartoonist.

GOVERNOR James A. Rhodes announced June 15 the appointment of Duncan M. Baxter to the Ohio University Board of Trustees for a seven-year term ending May 13, 1973. Baxter, vice president and general manager of Detroit Steel Corporation's Portsmouth Division, succeeds C. Don McVay of Athens, who served three seven-year terms.

THE OHIO branch college at Martins Ferry was transferred in June to the St. Clairsville - Richland High School. The new site is just a short distance from the proposed location for a future branch campus in Belmont County.

PRESIDENT Vernon R. Alden told Ohio's Capital Planning and Improvements Advisory Board May 27 that he is hopeful construction of the first college building at the Portsmouth, O., branch will be started in January. He said the building planned would contain 28 rooms and estimated cost at between $1 and $2 million. Dormitory construction could begin in 1965, Alden said.

Dean of Branches Albert C. Gubitz said the Portsmouth branch will continue as a two-year college in 1965. He added that time and enrollment will dictate when the college can be increased to four years, although there are certain areas now in which it offers work beyond two years.

SONS AND DAUGHTERS of all full-time employees of Ohio University are entitled to a waiver of approximately three-quarters of the comprehensive registration fee when enrolling at the University. The program was approved by the Board of Trustees in June and will go in effect this month with the opening of the fall semester.

Although the plan has been in effect for children of non-academic employees during the past six years, this is the first time it has been extended to include children of faculty and administrative personnel. The amount waived on existing fees of $225 per semester and $80 per summer will be $175 and $60 respectively.

Dr. Uhrbrock

TWO PROFESSORS, Dr. Richard S. Uhrbrock and Dr. James V. Rice, have retired from the Ohio University faculty.

Dr. Uhrbrock, who joined the psychology department in 1957, has been with the Procter and Gamble Co. for 27 years as head of the research department of the industrial relations and associate director of industrial relations.

Author of numerous books in the area of industrial psychology, he did research for another book at the British Museum in London this summer. He will make his home in Athens.

Dr. Rice, who was appointed to the romance languages faculty in 1938, had previously taught at the University of Michigan, Johns Hopkins University and the University of Akron.

A native of Dayton, he holds degrees from the Ohio State University, University of Michigan, and Johns Hopkins University. He is the author of a biography of Gabriel Naude and articles published in professional journals. Dr. and Mrs. Rice will also make their home in Athens.

A CONTRACT FOR $14,435 from the Office of Naval Research has been awarded to Ohio University for research in acoustics aimed at producing efficient underwater sound projectors and receivers. The research, originally supported by the Ohio University Fund, Inc., will be directed by Dr. F. B. Stumpf, associate professor of physics.

TRANSFER of the Post Office building in Athens, through the Department of Public Health, Education, and Welfare, to Ohio University was announced June 19 by the General Services Administration. The University plans to use the building for administrative and classroom purposes as soon as remodeling can be accomplished. Target date is early 1965.

Acquisition of the building, also in demand by Athens city and county officials, will enable the University to go ahead with plans to tear down Ewing Hall and make room for a new library.

COMPLETION DATE for a 10-story $3.5 million private dormitory for Ohio students has been set for August, 1965. Demolition of homes occupying the future site was begun in July. A New York realty and construction firm is financing the building, to be named Lowell Hall.

OHIO UNIVERSITY and Battelle Memorial Institute, Columbus, O., will again combine resources next month to present their second Research Management Program. The program, scheduled for October 4-16, in Columbus, will emphasize the management of ideas, the management of people, and the management of money. Maximilian N. Brinkman, director of management development programs in Ohio's College of Business Administration, is coordinator for the concentrated program.

"AMERICAN WIFE," a sculpture by Ohio University's David Hostetler and described by Cincinnati Enquirer art critic Arthur Darack as a figure that "slouches like Shirley Booth, without sensuousness, sensuality or invitation of any sort," was quickly purchased for the celebrated Friedman Collection after it went on display in Cincinnati's Flair House.

Selected as one of the displays for the first showing at the new four-story gallery, Hostetler's works continue to receive the recognition that has been growing rapidly in recent months and has led to selection for an important New York showing in the near future.

SEVENTY PEACE CORPS candidates arrived on the Ohio campus June 21 for a rigorous 11-week summer training program in preparation for two years of service in The Federal Republic of Cameroon, West Africa. Of this year's group, 65 were sent to teach in that country's schools. Five were scheduled for land and survey work.

DONALD P. CORDERMAN, '53 has been named Director of Non-Academic Personnel at Ohio University. He succeeds James R. Heady, '53, who died April 27 in Athens following a short illness.

Corderman, a native of Cincinnati, was employed by the City of Cincinnati and the State Department of Personnel, Columbus, before assuming his new post at Ohio. He is married to the former Shirley Ryan, '55. They have two children, Gary, 5, and Alisa, 3.

MR. AND MRS. John W. LaFrance show Ohio President Vernon R. Alden ceramic tiles around their fireplace that chronicle special events in their life. Mrs. LaFrance, '34, a member of the Alumni Association's Board of Directors, made the tiles. Three tiles depict Ohio University scenes and another contains autographs of prominent University faculty and administrative members. The LaFrances' were hosts at a cocktail party preceding the dinner meeting of the Toledo Alumni Chapter at Inverness Club May 22.

EXCELLENT WEATHER conditions have allowed construction workers to go full-steam ahead on the new Ohio University Inn. University officials have indicated that the Inn will be "definitely ready" to accommodate returning alumni at Homecoming.

New Ohio University Inn To Be Ready For Homecoming

THE OHIO University Inn, built by John W. Galbreath, '20, prominent Columbus, O., real estate executive, will be "definitely ready" to accommodate returning alumni at Homecoming. Target date for completion is October 1.

The Inn, which contains 150 sleeping rooms, a ballroom, seminar and conference room, a swimming pool, and several dining rooms, is located on a six-acre plot of land at the corner of Richland Avenue and Dairy Lane, about four blocks south of the main campus.

Alumni desiring reservations in the new Inn should write to George Pryor, John W. Galbreath Co., 42 East Gay Street, Columbus, O.

The Inn is constructed in a manner to permit later expansion, because, according to Galbreath, "I have confidence in the rapid growth of the University and the economic development of the area." He also emphasized that the Inn will serve the needs of the general public as well as the University.

Seven years ago Galbreath, a member of the Board of Trustees and the Board of Directors of the Ohio University Fund, Inc., donated a $250,000 inter-denominational chapel to the University in memory of his first wife, Helen Mauck Galbreath, who died in 1946. In 1962 he presented the University with a $75,000 full four-keyboard organ for Memorial Auditorium.

Alumni Secretary Jack D. Gilbert is making plans to schedule some Homecoming Weekend alumni activities in the Inn to give returning grads an opportunity to visit the new facility.

Gilbert also said that the Inn may be used for post-game coffee hours after Bobcat home games.

The Ohio University Fund, Inc., was established in September, 1945, to serve many purposes for which the use of State monies would be inappropriate or impossible. Its uses are limited only by the will of its officers but has been drawn upon most frequently to pay for scholarships, research, library needs, student aid, and the buying of needed equipment.

Dear Alumni:

"Nothing succeeds like success" is a common quotation, but I cannot think of a better description for the Ohio University Fund Report. Ohio alumni are beginning to realize that although we are a State University, we are in urgent need of your financial assistance and extra support. You are responding to our needs and our appeals. You are sending us money. The idea and the movement feeds upon itself; — one alumnus tells another.

The total amount contributed by alumni in last year's report was $90,774. This year, the total amount given by alumni is listed as $104,725. This is an increase of 15.6% over last year's total. Alumni notice these figures, and you are moved and impressed.

Naturally, you ask what have we done with this money? We are planning a new modern library with the latest electronic equipment. We have purchased laboratory equipment for research purposes and we have provided financial aid to worthy students.

This coming year will be an outstanding year for Ohio. And in addition to the projects listed above, we will need extra funds for our new Engineering and Science Research Center. Our new Counseling Center and our new Honors College will need special support.

The faculty, too, needs to be re-freshed and renewed through sabbatical grants and leaves.

For all these things we depend upon your continued support and interest.

Cordially,
Vernon R. Alden

LETTER FROM EDWIN L. KENNEDY

Dear Alumni and Friends:

The Ohio University Fund, Inc., has received more contributions than ever before. Every one of those checks bore two names: Ohio University Fund, of course . . . and yours. We're proud that ours was one of the names: we're grateful that yours was the other.

At Ohio University we must prepare young men and women to serve effectively in a society whose demands and dimensions can be only dimly viewed from this distance. Fortunately, the University has demonstrated a unique capacity to adapt to new circumstances while preserving the best of the past. Today, Ohio University stands at the peak of its powers — growing into greatness and broad national influence, gaining wide respect for its excellence in standards and services.

A share of the credit for this purposeful progress belongs to you and the thousands of alumni and friends whose support is so essential . . . and so gratefully acknowledged on the pages that follow.

Sincerely,

Each year the money will be devoted to a special use as determined by the Ohio University Fund Board of Trustees for its dynamic contribution to the task of making Ohio University a truly great University. Members in this society will receive regular reports of Ohio University plans and policies and other mailings.

The chairman of the Jacob Lindley Society is Mr. William E. Burt, '36. Bill has always been very active in alumni affairs throughout the many areas in which he has lived during recent years. He is associated with the Royal McBee Company as Eastern Region Sales Manager at the present time. Bill, his wife, Gertrude, and their two boys live in Westport, Connecticut.

THE HONOR ROLL

Ohio University is proud to present the 1963-64 HONOR ROLL of alumni, friends, organizations, and corporations whose gifts to the Ohio University Fund have begun or sustained significant programs.

MATCHING GIFT PROGRAM

Shown below in grateful recognition are the companies who this year matched the contributions of Ohio University alumni.

Matching Gifts are a growing factor in the total structure of corporate support for higher education. While stressing that matching gift programs should be viewed as only a part of the whole, we do feel that they are of value and urge alumni to bring the idea to the attention of their companies.

PERSONAL APPEAL PROGRAM

The Personal Appeal Program is of significant importance to the Ohio University Fund in that it offers the opportunity to gain closer contact with our alumni.

Though still a new and growing program, eleven successful personal appeal drives were run throughout Ohio this past year. Organized on a county basis, alumni volunteers working with local chairmen contacted fellow alumni in their respective areas.

These volunteers were effective in presenting the financial needs of the University which in turn, resulted in a substantial increase in both the number of contributions and the size of the gifts received.

ANNUAL FUND GROWTH SINCE 1955

ALLOCATION OF UNRESTRICTED CONTRIBUTIONS

The importance of unrestricted gifts to the Ohio University Fund, Inc., is immeasurable. Designation of such contributions is handled by the Board of Trustees and in this way money is channeled to the most needy areas of the University. Thus, gifts which are not ear-marked for a particular department or purpose are applied to their fullest use.

BOBCAT LAIR

by Frank D. Morgan

COACH BILL HESS looks for the 1964 Bobcats to be stronger than the Ohio club that won the Mid-American Conference Championship last year, but he's not willing to sit back and gloat over that single premise. One look at the '64 schedule Ohio must face precludes that unlikely possibility.

And, anyone who knows Bill Hess and the perfectionist techniques he operates under would never make that mistaken assumption.

Hess frankly expects the entire conference to be stronger this year and unqualifiedly the outside competition Ohio is tackling this season (West Texas State and Purdue, back-to-back yet) will be tougher.

Ohio looks to be no strikingly new ballclub with a lot of changes from last year. After much experimentation in the early going last season, Hess had the Bobcats settle down to rock-'em, sock-'em, grind-it-out football in the tough going which led the determined 'Cats to three straight MAC victories and Hess' second MAC title in six years at the Ohio helm.

The Bobcats figure to follow a similar pattern as last year, with perhaps a few more specialists entering the picture in an effort to take best advantage of the new rule changes. Backfield depth looks good, but lack of interior line depth is the main problem for Hess to solve.

BY POSITION, the 'Cats may line up like this: ENDS: All-Conference Ron Fowlkes, "the finest blocking end I've ever coached" according to Hess and the best defensive end in the league and Chuck Turner, a junior who saw considerable action last year and came along fast, will make Ohio sound defensively. Those two likely starters will be backed up by letterman Dan Belu and sophomore standout Bill Biggs, a hometown Athens' boy, converted from a high school quarterback to end, who came fast this spring.

TACKLES: Hess is blessed at this spot with two outstanding veterans, John Frick, honorable mention All-MAC last year who will be a starter for his third consecutive season, and 6-3, 240 Ron Stepsis, second team MAC last year, who suffered a knee injury last spring but should return in fine shape this fall. Hess is high on both these veterans and calls them two of the finest tackles in the league. They'll be spelled by senior Larrie Schlapman who has seen limited action, but who had a fine spring and looks to play a lot of football this fall, dependable Dave Stout, a junior, who played quite a bit last year, and who will see more action this fall. Hess describes him as a "good, sound football player." Sophomore Willard Parr, a high school all-stater from Hillsboro, has great potential because of his tremendous size and strength. At 6-4, 270, Parr is the biggest lineman Hess has had in the past six years. He moves well in spite of his burlyness. Another sophomore who shows promise is Bob Blaine, who only needs experience. Other tackle candidates are Andy Kostraba, Bill Lupton and Bob Walsh.

GUARDS: Hess says Lance Tigyer, a senior who has been Ohio's starting middle guard for two years as a defensive specialist but who played both ways last spring, "is the most aggressive and rugged lineman for his size on the club. He loves to hit and will play a lot of football for us this fall." His coach calls Jim Thimmies, left guard, the "most pleasant surprise of spring practice." Thimmies, a senior, saw limited action his first two years on the varsity, but came fast this spring to earn a

CENTERS: Skip Hoovler, Ohio's great center, Williamson All-American last fall, and honorable mention All-American on both AP & UPI teams, returns for his senior year. A 6-3, 230 ball of fire, this man is in on practically every tackle, pursues like a demon, and loves to play aggressive, hard-nosed football. He complains in practice if play isn't tough enough. He went through four football helmets last year. "He's unqualifiedly All-American," says Hess, "and could play on any ballclub in the country and be outstanding."

Mike LaBeau, a sophomore, is Skip's understudy, and "another pleasant surprise this spring," according to his coach. Moved to center after the first week of spring ball, he moved right up to offense specialist understudying Hoovler. Fred Cooper, another sophomore, shows promise and junior Jim Kellough, an aggressive, hard-working ballplayer, gives Ohio depth.

QUARTERBACKS: Wes Danyo, with a year of experience behind him, could develop into one of the MAC's better field generals. He's a capable passer (42 of 108 for 365 yards and a completion average of .388 last year), has good hands and can run with the football. Larry Bainter, Wes' understudy last year, had a fine spring until sidelined by a knee operation, should return in good shape this fall. This pair gives Ohio a one-two punch here. Don Cole is a steady performer and Alex Koslow, fine freshman passer last year (17 of 40 for 374 yards for .425 percent) with more experience could move into the picture before the season's end.

HALFBACKS: Senior Ron Curtis, a starter for two years and co-captain this fall, is an excellent inside power runner and hard-nosed blocker. "A fine defender, Ron is a good, all-around player and my type of halfback—tough, loves to hit and can take it," says Hess. Sam Bogan, the only sophomore to break into the starting lineup during spring ball, has shown fine outside speed. As a frosh, he collected 95 yards in 21 trips for a fine 4.5 average. Bob Andersen, a junior, will specialize on defense with two other juniors, Jerry France, tough and speedy, and Glenn Hill, break-away threat, giving Ohio good depth here.

FULLBACKS: Dave Boykin, a junior who saw a lot of action last fall (195 yards in 38 tries for a 5.1 average), is an offensive specialist and extremely powerful inside runner. He's being pushed for the starting nod by Wash Lyons (208 yards in 47 trips for a 4.4 average) who came fast in spring ball and ended up even with Boykin for the starting role this fall. Lyons has good breakaway speed for a fullback.

ALUMNI CIRCUIT

by Jack D. Gilbert

THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION will emphasize six major programs this year which will extend its scope of service to Ohio University and broaden its base of future operations.

President Milton J. Taylor, '50, of Lancaster, Ohio, has pledged his leadership to these key areas:

CHAPTER DEVELOPMENT, particularly in Ohio where more than two-thirds of the university's alumni reside.

CAMPUS VISITATION involving 2000 outstanding students and their parents.

AN INTERN PROGRAM in which alumni provide assistance in placing talented undergraduates in professional summer employment allied to the student's major field of study.

OPERATION FRIENDSHIP, an alumni-coordinated project which enables university foreign students to reside and exchange cultures in a medium-size American community.

COMMUNITY VISITATION which sponsors a team of university experts on pre-college counseling who will meet with students in major population areas throughout Ohio.

THE ALUMNI COLLEGE, a continuing education program which blends stimulating classroom experiences with pleasant recreational opportunities.

In addressing himself to chapter development, President Taylor is concerned with the involvement of the maximum number of alumni in the Association's role to promote Ohio University.

"With more than 22,000 graduates in Ohio, we have an unlimited opportunity to build on the sound club program which now exists," he reported to the Association Board of Directors.

"A comprehensive chapter development program in our home state will not only increase ten-fold the Association's capacity to assist the university, but it will also set the standards for greater national alumni programs," he said.

The first major project of this academic year is scheduled Saturday, October 31. Eight Ohio counties will participate in a campus visitation by the top twenty-five per cent of their high school seniors.

In five of these counties—Ross, Washington, Muskingum, Morgan and Belmont—plans for the visitation are being implemented with the organization of chapters.

Established alumni clubs in Montgomery (Dayton), Fairfield (Lancaster), and Scioto (Portsmouth) complete the project areas.

An estimated 2000 students and their parents will come to Athens, tour the campus, attend pre-college counseling sessions and complete the day by seeing the Ohio-Dayton football game.

For the past two years, this program has been centered in one county, Fairfield.

Nationally, President Taylor is asking chapters to support The Intern Program by naming chairmen and/or committees to assist Campus Intern Director Robert Hynes in recruiting summer job opportunities for leading scholars. During the past year, Ohio students have been placed in top engineering, research, banking, law and government jobs across the nation.

In addition, every chapter will be encouraged to promote the 1965 Alumni College, to be held next July 11-17.

To provide national leadership, President Taylor has appointed Alice Wright, of Painesville, Ohio, as chairman of this drive. Mrs. Wright is former president of the Southern California Chapter, and in June she was named the Outstanding Club President of 1964.

After personally observing the Alumni College program last July, President Taylor said: "This can easily be one of the most popular projects available to alumni. With Alice Wright's leadership, and the cooperation of alumni leaders everywhere, we intend to triple next year's attendance."

Aside from these major program areas, President Taylor and Association directors have set goals to revitalize Homecoming and Alumni Day programs, to involve chapter leaders more closely in processes leading to alumni awards and election of directors and to enhance, where possible, the image of the University.

"All of us represent the leading university in the country," President Taylor said. "Whenever Ohio University is mentioned it means something of value to those who hear it. Each alumnus can be proud of this reputation. Each alumnus can add to this image by participation in alumni programs. This is the most we will ask from any graduate in the year ahead."
